Managing gout in primary care Part 1 - Talking about gout: time for a re-think. Gout is a treatable form of arthritis that is associated with poor health and reduced life expectancy. Too often, gout management is focused on controlling the patient's symptoms while their risk of irreversible joint damage and negative health outcomes continues to grow. Mori and Pacific peoples are disproportionately affected by gout and often receive sub-optimal care; it is time for a re-think to address.
